The American Legion's Children & Youth Programs

FOR GOD AND COUNTRY WE ASSOCIATE OURSELVES TOGETHER

FOR THE FOLLOWING PURPOSES:

To uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States of America;

To maintain law and order;

To foster and perpetuate a one hundred percent Americanism;

To preserve the memories and incidents of our associations in all wars;

To inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community,
state and nation;

To combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses;

To make right the master of might;

To promote peace and goodwill on earth;

To safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of justice,
freedom and democracy;

To consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness.

Origins of the Whole Child Concept

The American Legion's commitment to children in need spans to the organization's earliest years. At that time, war orphans lacked stable parenting, support, food and shelter. Teens often dropped out of school and left home – if they had much of a home at all – and found trouble.

The welfare of children rose as a priority in the Legion “by sheer natural law,” one author wrote.

Emma Puschner, a former St. Louis lawyer and social worker, was chief architect of the Legion's platform – and soon-to-be pillar – of support for at-risk children. During her 25-year career as an American Legion director, she became a national figure in the development of local, state and federal programs, such as Aid to Families with Dependent Children, along with others that aimed to curb juvenile delinquency, help kids with disabilities and those who faced turmoil at home.

Foremost, her nationally recognized work to help all children in need was seeded and nurtured through The American Legion.

Emma Puschner served as director of the National Child Welfare Division for 25 years, beginning in August 1926.

The American Legion's "Whole Child Plan" is guided by four key goals for all kids

These principles continue to guide The American Legion's Children & Youth Committee, which works to improve the lives of young people who need assistance most, no matter their conditions or circumstances.

Today's Children & Youth Program

The spirit behind the "Whole Child Plan" is well reflected today by the American Legion's Children & Youth Committee of the national Americanism Commission.

The committee's purpose is distilled into American Legion plans, programs and activities designed to:

- Assure care and protection for children of veterans
- Improve conditions for all children and youth, with due concern for maintaining the integrity of the family home
- Prevent social and physical ills of children and youth where possible, using services of, and cooperating with, sound organizations and agencies for children and youth
- Maintain a balanced program that provides for the physical, emotional, intellectual and spiritual needs of children

Community, State and Nation

“We are happy to do it. It’s giving back to the community and children in need. Hopefully there’s some kids who are going to have a good Christmas.”

The American Legion Children & Youth Committee fulfills its pillar purpose of the organization at every level.

Nationally, The American Legion’s dedication to improving the lives of children and youth in need takes many forms, including:

- Temporary Financial Assistance grants for military and qualified veteran families with minor children who have been hit with financial hardships that jeopardize the stability of their homes
- The American Legion Child Welfare Foundation, which disburses grants to non-profit organizations and other entities that work to help children confronting challenges beyond their control
- Policy positions for legislative testimony and advocacy on matters of child safety, education, substance abuse and family stability

At the state level, American Legion programs and services vary but include:

- Involvement and support for Special Olympics

- Fundraising and assistance for children with special needs, including those from low-income families who require hearing aids, prosthetic limbs or have other needs
- Immunization promotion
- Fulfillment of holiday programs for children
- Assistance and support for agencies that help children who have disabilities, lack parents or otherwise need mentorship

Locally, American Legion Children & Youth programs are adapted to meet the needs of their unique communities, from financial support for grief-counseling camps to the provision of school supplies for low-income families and awareness building of threats to healthy upbringings. Every community has different needs, so support varies, but some examples include:

- Holiday events
- Family Fun Days
- Warm winter clothes for kids in need
- After-school programs
- Summer activities
- Lunches and meals

“A lot of folks who join the military today are from low-income or moderate-income families. A lot of our active-duty military and a lot of our veterans experienced food insecurity themselves when they were growing up. A lot of our members had that experience. And the members of Post 109 understand that there are a lot of families in America today wondering where their next meal is coming from.”

-Arizona Legionnaire John Cuddy, whose post in Tucson raised and donated $4,500 to combat food insecurity among schoolchildren in the community

Temporary Financial Assistance

The American Legion's Temporary Financial Assistance program originally was designed to assist families when active-duty personnel are suddenly deployed without much notice, leaving spouses with minor children at home. It now extends to all active-duty military and/or qualified American Legion members.

American Legion national support for families with children at home, however, began long before that, in the mid-1920s when The American Legion Endowment Fund, now doing business as The American Legion Veterans & Children Foundation, was established.

For military families with children, pay can be sporadic and the challenge of holding a family together is often complicated. Costs increase when only one parent is available to help at home. In 2019, junior enlisted personnel of the U.S. Coast Guard had their pay delayed more than 30 days during a government shutdown. Those with children at home received more than $1.2 million in American Legion Temporary Financial Assistance grants to get them through the hardship. Temporary Financial Assistance grants are routed through American Legion posts and state, territorial or foreign departments before they are approved at the national level. Dozens of TFA grants are also handled entirely at the local level.

The American Legion Temporary Financial Assistance program ensures that qualified military and veteran families with minor children at home can pay for food, shelter, clothing or other necessities when sudden, unexpected financial hardships strike. The national program distributes between $250,000 and $1.2 million each year in one-time cash grants of up to $1,500 each.

American Legion Veterans & Children Foundation

The American Legion Veterans & Children Foundation (ALVCF) feeds and houses children of military personnel and veterans facing urgent, unexpected hardships. It prevents eviction, keeps the power on and fulfills basic needs to hold a family together through difficult times.

That's because the ALVCF is the only funding source for The American Legion's national Temporary Financial Assistance program, which has provided more than $18 million in cash grants to struggling families since its inception. The foundation relies entirely on charitable donations from individuals, like-minded associations and corporate allies.

Since its inception in 1925 as the American Legion Endowment Fund, the foundation has assisted millions of veterans, their families and children in need. In 2019, the American Legion Endowment Fund began doing business as the American Legion Veterans & Children Foundation to more clearly state who benefits from tax-deductible donations to the separate non-profit 501c3 element of the nation's largest veterans organization.

“The Sons of The American Legion always strive to support our nation’s veterans and youth, and being able to provide this kind of support all at once to the Veterans & Children Foundation is something that every SAL member should be proud of.”

– Sons of The American Legion (2023-24) National Commander Donald L. “J.R.” Hall, Jr., after the SAL approved to make a $250,000 donation to the ALVCF
